Hark! The Herald Angels Sing

Written by Charles Wesley within a year of his conversion, this song was first published under the title "Hymn for Christmas Day" in Hymns and Sacred Poems (1739). There is no gentle warmup for this song; it jumps right into the action when the angels appear to the shepherds and herald the birth of Jesus. Much of the text in the first stanza is an adaptation of Luke 2:14. Wesley does inject his own theological interpretation of this grand event with the statement "God and sinners reconciled." www.umc.org

Away in a Manger

Also known as "Luther's Cradle Hymn," a popular belief in the early 1900s held that Martin Luther composed this hymn in the 16th century. One published version of the song in 1887 stated that Luther composed it for his children, though it does not appear in his works or in German church history. It is more likely that the carol was written by German Lutherans in Pennsylvania. The first two verses were published in the 1885 Little Children's Book without an attribution to an author. The author of the third verse ("Be near me, Lord Jesus") is also unknown.

Silent Night

The original German lyrics "Stille Nacht! Heilige Nacht!" were written in 1816 by Josef Mohr, a Catholic priest from Austria. Tradition holds that two years later, faced with a rusty, broken organ (some say damaged by mice) on Christmas Eve, Mohr gave the lyrics to Austrian headmaster Franz Gruber and asked him to compose the melody on guitar. At first Gruber declined because the guitar was popularly used for drinking songs, but finally agreed and created a Christmas song loved throughout the world. "Silent Night" is said to be one of the songs both English and German soldiers sang together in the great Christmas truce of 1914 during World War I. www.umc.org

Angels We Have Heard on High

The French roots of this carol can be found in the 1700s in "Les Anges dans nos Campagnes," which means "the angels in the countryside." The French verses were coupled with a refrain taken from Luke 2:14 in the Latin version of the Bible: "Gloria, in excelsis Deo," which means "Glory to God in the highest." The traditional tune is attributed to Edward Shippen Barnes, an American organist who studied at Yale University from 1910-11 and then briefly at Schola Cantorum in Paris. www.umc.org
